Conversation, caffeine make the scene at local coffeehouse

By Joe Bel Bruno
North County News

The music is hip. The employees are hipper. And wall-to-wall, the java jive is on the revive at Cafe Nove.

The scene inside rivals the late-night atmosphere at some of the more trendy Los Angeles establishments. Coffee mugs in hand, patrons look like they've climbed out from the depths of underground culture to grab a quick fix of caffeine.

Most sit on couches discussing politics and the human race. Others sit at tables playing an eclectic selection of board games of their childhood.

Patrons contend the pursuit of the perfect cup of joe and offbeat atmosphere used to take them an hour up the freeway to places such as Melrose Avenue in Los Angeles. Cafe Nove is just a few minutes away from another Melrose Avenue, inside a strip mall that straddles the Anaheim-Placentia border.

"Who says you have to go all the way to LA or Long Beach to find a good coffeehouse?" said Kevin Knight, who was hired to manage entertainment for the coffeehouse after hanging out every night there for about seven months.

"There is so much attitude at some of those places up there ... it's a meat market. Down here, everyone welcomes you with open arms. It's relaxing."

Owners Fred Pecora and Saturo, who only goes by one name, opened the coffee bar in March, 1992. One reason doors opened was because Pecora owns a hair salon next door, and both business would promote each other.

The other reason Cafe Nove was opened, explains Saturo, is to offer locals a place to go that won't cost too much.

"We are trying to expand Orange County. It gives people a place to hang out at and not have to worry," said Saturo. "You can get high off of coffee instead of shooting (things) up your veins."

It's not just the coffee, which costs between $1 and $2 per cup, that packs the place every weekend. Live entertainment during the week and college bands are part of the draw.

Bands such as the Swamp Zombies, Too Many Joes and the Balistics already have appeared at the small venue. For

Utility tax is raised

Increase will balance budget

By Joe Bel Bruno
North County News

City Council members on Tuesday approved a 1 percent increase in the city's utility tax, ending a contentious public debate on how to balance the city's budget.

An estimated 400 residents and city employees looked on as the City Council voted 4-1 to increase the utility tax from 3 percent to 4 percent.

Mayor Maria Moreno cast the only dissenting vote. She said the city's budget deficit could have been solved by cutting more out of the budget instead of raising taxes.

"It has caused me a great deal of pain on what to do over an issue that has polarized this community," said Moreno, who wanted to let residents vote on the tax increase in November.

"Money spent on an election is money well spent. I just won't vote on a major tax without their approval," Moreno said.

But the majority of council members agreed the tax is

Boy, 13, killed playing with gun

Charges may be filed against the shooter's father

The Orange County Register

They were 13-year-old best friends who played on the Little League Royals for two years straight.

They were excited and anxious about entering high school this fall but knew they could make it together.

But their plans ended July 29 when Dalen Demary playfully squeezed the trigger of his father's 9mm gun and a bullet plunged into the chest of his best friend, Kevin Wilsey, who died an hour later.

Demary later told police that the boys were alone in the master bedroom of his Loyola Drive home when he decided to show Wilsey his father's pistol, stowed behind a bedpost.

> "When I last saw (Demary) he was still in a daze and shocked by the whole thing and didn't know his friend had died."
> Corrine Loomis

The ammunition clip was removed, but unknown to either boy, a round was in the chamber. Police said the shooting was accidental.

"When I last saw (Demary) he was still in a daze and shocked by the whole thing and didn't know his friend had died," said Corrine Loomis, a Placentia police spokeswoman.

Demary is with relatives in Northern California, she said. His father, Thomas, 45, could not be reached.

The case is expected to be handed to the Orange County district attorney, who will decide whether a felony charge should be filed against Thomas Demary for leaving the gun accessible to his son, Loomis said.

A 1992 law makes such an act a criminal offense.

Wilsey's death was the fourth accidental shooting involving children in Orange County this year, police said.

Robert Wilsey, 46, the slain boy's father, said his son wanted to become a lawyer, get married and become a millionaire by age 27.

He said Kevin Wilsey was nicknamed "The Boy" as a joking reference to his 6-foot frame.

"He was only supposed to be gone a couple of hours," Robert Wilsey whispered. "They were both real good, fine kids anybody would be proud of."

A funeral mass was held Tuesday at St. Joseph's Catholic Church in Placentia.

Besides his father, Kevin Wilsey is survived by his mother, Linda Kendrick of Cerritos; stepmother, Mary Wilsey; sisters, Kelly, 15, and Tracy, 11; brother, Harold Robertson; and grandmothers, Olga Burmester and Bernice Bert.

Placentia man arrested on suspicion of stalking

The Orange County Register

A Placentia man was arrested on suspicion of stalking after he allegedly pursued a female motorist with his car for more than an hour Saturday night, yelling and making obscene gestures, police said.

Michael Allan Kamenszki, 25, was released after posting a bond for $50,000 bail Sunday, police said.

An 18-year-old Costa Mesa woman, whom police would not identify, said she was driving on Newport Boulevard in Costa Mesa about 7:15 p.m. Saturday when Kamenszki, who was driving in the next lane, began yelling at her, Lt. Jeff Cope said.

After tailgating her, Kamenszki allegedly pulled alongside her car, made obscene gestures toward the woman and swerved his car toward hers, Cope said.

"(She) felt that (his) intention was to force her off the road where he would be able to rape, rob or kill her," Cope said.

Seeking to evade the man, the woman sped up to 80 mph, slowed down and changed lanes, but her pursuer continued to follow her through Newport Beach and into Huntington Beach, Cope said.

The woman then used her cellular phone to call 911 and drove toward the Huntington Beach police station, Cope said. When patrol cars arrived, Kamenszki tried to flee but was arrested.

Kamenszki told officers he was merely following his girlfriend home from a bar, but the woman said she had never seen the man before, Cope said.

Under the state's stalking law, the offense could be prosecuted either as a felony or misdemeanor, Sgt. Val Birkett said.

Burning motor home blocks freeway

North County News

A burning motor home closed all lanes of the Riverside (91) Freeway on Saturday, and the wreckage blocked most of the road for about two hours, according to the California Highway Patrol.

An Anaheim police officer reported a motor home fully engulfed in flames on the eastbound freeway west of Kraemer Boulevard shortly before 7 p.m. Firefighters put out the blaze and no one was injured.

The initial traffic jam caused by the fire prompted some motorists to drive the wrong way down on-ramps to get off the freeway, a CHP dispatcher said. Only one lane was open until shortly before 9 p.m.

Chamber dues can be paid by credit card

By Joe Bel Bruno
North County News

Chamber of Commerce officials hope that plastic might be a way to make it easier for business owners to pay membership dues.

The chamber is now accepting credit cards for payment of dues and also has developed a system whereby members can pay on a quarterly basis. Both are ways to keep membership dues coming in to the business organization, which has faced tough financial times this year.

"We are being creative," Executive Director Dave Musgrove said. "We depend on the membership dues to keep us going. And, we are trying to make it as easy as possible for business owners to get through this crazy economy."

The 69-year-old chamber began feeling the strain this year when more than 20 percent of its members did not pay their dues, which range from $150 to $300 a year. The dues account for 62 percent of the chamber's estimated $75,000 annual budget.

The chamber sponsors seminars, business breakfasts, mixers, Student-in-Government Day and the city's annual Heritage Festival. It also fields about 3,000 phone calls and handles about 700 visitors every three months, according to Musgrove.

One member said that organization dues can be a strain for small businesses.

"This recession has caused all of us to struggle," said Vicky Ann Ritchie, who owns Bear Roots Florists. "I belong to several other organizations, and the bills seem to hit around the same time. Some of us don't have enough to come up with all the money it takes to belong."

She feels the new payment plans will "make the strain easier on members and encourage new members who thought they couldn't afford it."

The use of credit card payments for a chamber of commerce is the first in Orange County, Musgrove said.

The system has been in place for several weeks. Members have already used it to pay for mixers and even tickets to the chamber's upcoming golf tournament in August.

"Some of the direction changes since the first of the year have worked, but things are still very tight," Musgrove said. "I'm not saying we have a surplus at all, but we see the light at the end of the tunnel and it's not a train."

Bone marrow donor would do it again

Gave someone's child a chance to live, woman says

By Lisa O'Neill
North County News

Sam Gangwer/North County News
Shirley Belloli: "It's a blessing to have been chosen to do this."

The voice on the telephone that December day last year said the 20,000-to-1 odds had been beaten.

A bone marrow donor had been found for Marie, a 20-year-old college sophomore who was fighting a rare and extremely aggressive form of leukemia.

For Marie, the bone marrow transplant was her last chance.

For donor Shirley Belloli, emotionally it was like giving birth.

Only Belloli would never meet the recipient of her marrow.

And to this day, she does not know the real identities of Marie or her family, with whom she corresponded by mail before and after the transplant.

And although Marie died six weeks after the procedure, Belloli, the mother of twin sons, did it to give someone else's child a chance at life.

And she would do it again.

The Placentia resident and medical transcriptionist is a member of the National Marrow Donor Program, which matches patients with life-threatening illnesses, such as leukemia or aplastic anemia, with marrow donors.

Like only about 1,900 others nationwide, Belloli gave her marrow to a complete stranger.

She stayed overnight in the hospital and in 1½-hour procedure under general anesthesia, had a liter of marrow extracted from her back.

The experience both fell short and went beyond her expectations.

"The pain was absolutely minimal," she said. "And emotionally, it was such a high."

The marrow was taken from Belloli and given to Marie within 12 hours. Marie received the marrow intraveneously in a procedure similar to a blood transfusion.

The two weeks leading up to that point, however, were extremely stressful both for donor and patient.

But it was a good stress, Belloli said.

"The final two weeks are called the point of no return," she said. The recipient of the marrow undergoes chemotherapy and/or radiation treatment that wipes out his or her own marrow — healthy as well as diseased cells are destroyed. "If at this point, (the patient) doesn't get the transplant she'll die," Belloli said.

Belloli first heard about the donor program when a search was on for marrow for a young child at her church. Belloli gave a small sample of her blood but was not a match.

Two-and-a-half years later, however, she was found to be a match for a young girl referred to only as Marie in letters from the girl's mother. Marie's family doesn't know the identity of Belloli and addressed the letters to "Dear Donor" or "Dear Precious Donor."

Anonymity is important, said Bunnie Foxcroft, director of the local Red Cross Marrow Program.

"What happens if the donor has a bad experience during surgery or after, and the patient relapses?" she said. "The donor may not want to do it again."

Foxcroft also said that if the donor and recipient meet and the recipient died, it would be harder for the donor.

Donor and recipient can meet after a year, however, if they both want to.

Marie was an only child. But had she had brothers and sisters, the chance of matching one of them would have been about 1 in 4. Belloli was the first unrelated volunteer donor to give marrow at her workplace, the Children's Hospital of Orange County. She stayed in the pediatric oncology ward and was "the only patient over 12 years old," she said.

Belloli's husband, Bob, said that his wife was enthusiastic about giving the marrow and that she recovered quickly.

Belloli was, in fact, up walking the night of the extraction.

Marrow donors must be between the ages of 18 and 55, in good health and able to pass a physical exam. Belloli also gave two units of her own blood, which were given back to her after the procedure.

"It's a lot to put yourself through for someone you don't know," said Bob Belloli, a faculty member at California State University, Fullerton. "Eventually this person's life is in your hands."

And although Marie died, the procedure was beginning to work. "The marrow did graft but she developed an infection which she couldn't fight," Belloli said.

"You can't look at it as a failure," she said. "Because they learn something every time.

"It's an amazing feeling ... You're carrying the responsibility for someone's life on your shoulders. It's a blessing to have been chosen to do this."

Belloli was recently honored by the American Red Cross Blood Services Marrow Program as one of 33 Southern Californians who donated bone marrow for a critically ill patient in 1992.

More than 1,800 marrow donations have been performed nationwide. CHOC received approval as a donation site last December, said Michele Millerick, who coordinates unrelated bone marrow donations. CHOC has harvested marrow for five volunteer donors, Millerick said.

An estimated 16,000 adults and children in the United States are stricken each year with leukemia and other blood-related diseases that can be treated with a bone marrow transplant.

Replacing diseased marrow with new, healthy marrow increases the chances for long-term survival from less than 20 percent to between 45 percent and 80 percent, depending on the disease, according to literature distributed by the National Marrow Donor Program.

There are currently 912,851 people in the NMDP Registry.

Millerick said the registry wants to increase the number of minorities participating in the program because the chances of finding a matching donor are greatest in a similar racial background.

And only 15 percent of the registry is made up of members of minority racial groups.

Ctiy plans veterans memorial

By Joe Bel Bruno
North County News

Tony Rangle remembers his first days home after being discharged after the Korean War.

Still wearing his Army uniform, Placentia welcomed him back with open arms. Taxi drivers gave the ex-soldier free rides and bartenders around town thanked him with drinks on the house, he said.

It was the same for his four brothers — all who grew up in Placentia and served as far back as World War II, Rangle said.

Their hometown now will thank Rangle and other soldiers again. The city plans to build a Veterans Memorial at City Hall by Nov. 1.

"I remember all the attention I got when I came home, then it's pretty much forgotten," said Rangle, who graduated from Valencia High School and went on to serve in the 82nd Airbone Division.

"This is putting our tax money to good use in remembering this, it is unique. It shows that we aren't going to forget," Rangle said.

The idea to build a memorial began almost three years ago when the Veterans Memorial Committee was formed. The City Council approved earlier this month plans for the monument, which will cost $38,000 to build.

It will include three marble pillars, with one in the center larger than the others. On them will be inscribed the names of those who grew up in Placentia or entered the service while living here.

An estimated 250 names have been gathered, and another 200 applications are expected to come in.

"This is to honor those veterans from Placentia and recognize them," City Administrator Robert D'Amato said.

Choice bills give parents greater say

By Bruce Bailey
North County News

Parents will have a greater say in which public schools their children attend beginning with the 1994-95 school year.

Local school officials, however, don't expect the new laws to have a significant effect in the Placentia Yorba Linda Unified School District.

Both bills were signed by Gov. Pete Wilson in July. One of the bills allows parents to send their children to any school in the district if there is space available.

The other allows parents to send their children to schools in another district if that district is accepting transfers.

Crash victims helping others

Couple establishes group, creates computer program

By Joe Bel Bruno
North County News

It's been nearly two years since tragedy struck a Placentia family whose 19-year-old daughter was among those killed in a plane crash.

That time has been filled with anguish for Don and Carolyn Erickson, whose daughter, Natalie, took off in a private plane with her boyfriend and three other friends on Nov. 14, 1991 for an overnight excursion.

The plane went down in a rugged area of the San Bernardino mountains and was missing for nearly eight months. When the official search ended, the families financed their own search and found the wreckage on July 6, 1992.

It was an agonizing experience for the families.

"It has been very tough on us, but we didn't give up when the search ended," said Don Erickson, a contractor who now lives in Orange. "There is so much crap that goes on in the world, but you don't have any idea how bad it is until it happens to you."

Since the search ended, Erickson has put together the Aviation Search & Relief Fund — an organization to help families in similar situations. Erickson also has formatted a computer program to make it easier for the Civil Air Patrol to keep track of notes filed during searches.

He has met with representatives from the Civil Air Patrol — the organization responsible for conducting searches when planes are reported lost — on how to improve the way searches are conducted.

His suggestions come from experience.

The search for Erickson's daughter was a nightmare, he said. On the plane with his daughter were pilot Richard Niemela, 27, of La Mirada; Jeff Bird, 32, and his wife, Cathy, 33, of Fullerton; and Jeff's brother, Bradley Bird, 33, of Placentia.

The families of the missing passengers enlisted the help of volunteer pilots to continue the search and paid for airplane fuel out of their own pockets. The air patrol gave up their search after covering more than 200,000 square miles in three states.

The search was long and arduous, Erickson said. He contends family members were never given enough time, which Erickson pins on the fact they were too busy. He remembers calling for information about the search and having one of the volunteers ask who he was.

"It's a very traumatic experience when you have to deal with what is going on in your head and trying to be updated on how the search is going," said Erickson, who wants to join the Civil Air Patrol as a liaison to families in order to avoid similar problems.

He also said when the families put together a private search, understanding the notes scribbled in long hand by those who previously led the search was nearly impossible.

He formatted a computer program that would complete calculations automatically, making notes simple to go over once the search is over.

"After the search we got ahold of the information and tried to read it, there came up a lot of questions simply because we couldn't make out what they wrote down," he said. "They need to be updated and more efficient. My goal is to help any way I can, in remembrance of my daughter."

Erickson presented a computer and the program to Civil Air Patrol Col. Ernie Pearson last week to be examined.

necessary.

"Times are different now," Councilwoman Carol Downey said. "We need the funds to maintain the streets, maintain the parks and services. If you pay to maintain things it is cost-effective,"

Councilman Michael Maertzweiler agreed.

"We, the council, are right in the middle between the public and the state," he said. "I won't vote against something that could be the demise of this city. It is a nominal amount to pay."

Residents and businesses will immediately see the increase in their gas, electric, cable and telephone bills. It is estimated the 1 percent increase will raise the average residential utility bill by $1.50 to $2 per month, city officials said.

The increase is expected to raise an estimated $433,000 toward the city's $761,000 deficit.

The state plans to take $402,000 in property taxes that went to Placentia last year. That amount, however, may be reduced by a six-month extension of the state's one-half percent sales tax and a one-time rebate from the state's motor vehicle fees. The tax increase also will help pay for a $328,000 increase in county fees for services.

Placentia first instituted a 5 percent utility tax in 1971. The tax has been raised and lowered several times since then.

About 40 residents spoke on the tax during the nearly five-hour public hearing.

"The utility tax has turned into a Jurassic Park on both sides," resident Bob Jiminez said. "We need to put this dinosaur to rest for once and for all."

Luci Grismer, one of the most outspoken opponents of the tax, opened the public hearing by submitting to the City Clerk more than 1,000 letters against the tax.

Grismer — known for her regular speeches on the city's spending habits — was recovering from throat surgery and had her son read her speech.

"I'm sure no one had an inkling that a windfall tax had just been handed to future council members," Michael Grismer said on his mother's behalf.

"Who would buy such an unnecessary capital improvements as the Placentia trolley for $76,000 ... back-up bus for $20,000 ... $11,000 for an electric paper cutter, a $5,000 postage meter and automobiles for all eight department heads?"

Resident Norman Toaub defended the tax, saying it also was designed to pay for capital improvements, including new police equipment.

"The money we spend goes for things in the Police Department and equipment to make this city better," he said. "It's worth the nominal money spent each month."

Resident Jim Park agreed.

"It's a painless way of making up any deficit in the budget. It's worth it," he said.

Opponents to tax increase say they aren't finished yet

By Joe Bel Bruno
North County News

The City Council's final vote to approve a 1 percent utility tax increase hasn't defeated some residents who believe the 23-year-old assessment needs to be changed.

Talk of continuing the campaign against the tax began only minutes after council members voted Tuesday to approve the increase.

Residents who formed a political action group against the tax increase said they aren't going away.

"We do have options," said Dale Goodman, who opposed the tax increase. "We now have to sit back and think about what can be done."

The group plans to meet today to discuss their plans. One option is collecting signatures to force a ballot initiative, which would ask residents to change the City Charter to place tougher restrictions on how future councils use the tax.

Other options include launching a recall effort against City Council members who voted for it, Goodman said. City Council members Michael Maertzweiler, Carol Downey, John Tynes and Norman Eckenrode voted for the increase. Mayor Maria Moreno voted against the increase.

"We don't know what we are going to do yet. We expected this would happen," said Luci Grismer, who helped start the group Citizens Lose on Utility Tax.

The group originally planned to start a petition drive and force a vote on the tax increase. The tax increase was passed as an "urgency ordinance" to allow the increase to take effect immediately.

Volunteers build YMCA center

By Lisa O'Neill
North County News

It has been, quite literally, a labor of love.

A group of volunteers is in the process of transforming an empty building into a place where teenagers can gather for sports and recreational activities, club meetings and parent-teen workshops.

And the building of this new Yorba Linda/Placentia YMCA youth center has been an unusual undertaking. Everything — from the property to the plumbing to the contracting — has been donated.

It's a project that has taken more than 1½ years and is nearing completion.

"It's been a little bit slower but that's the nature of it being done by volunteers," said Frank Jarmacz, executive director of the Yorba Linda/Placentia Family YMCA.

Volunteers juggled their regular work schedules and family commitments and worked on the center when time — or funds — allowed.

"You get a donation, you go like crazy for a while," said Steve Miller, whose company, Cheyenne Property Services, has provided the general and electrical contracting. "It's not like a regular construction project."

Miller, as with several of the volunteers, was a participant in YMCA programs. He has been active in the Indian Guides and Indian Princesses programs, which promote father and child togetherness.

With his 8-year-old son, Greg, and 5-year-old daughter, Kim, Miller has gone on camp-outs and field trips and has participated in arts and crafts.

And Kim and Greg are the reason that Miller helped out with the youth center.

"It's nice to see that I can give to the YMCA after everything they've done for the kids," he said. "It's only fair that you put something back."

The 2,200-square-foot property in the Villa Yorba Shopping Center on Bastanchury Road has been donated to the YMCA rent-free by the owners of the shopping center, T.I.K., Inc., a KOWA Group company.

"It's good for the community to have that kind of facility," said Karen White, executive director of the KOWA Group. Jarmacz said Takuya Ishida, president of KOWA, U.S.A., is very active in charity work and was willing to donate the space.

Paul DiGuiseppi, president of Champion Drywall, contributed all of the drywall and all of the necessary labor.

Like Miller, DiGuiseppi has participated in YMCA programs with his children.

"If you have kids, the Y is a good thing to have," he said. He wanted to do what he could for the Y. "Our YMCA is not supported in the way that it should be," he said.

Jarmacz said the new center will offer programs during the day as well as after school. He hopes to provide some kind of family counseling for children who get kicked out of school.

SCHOOLS

FROM 4

The bills may cause waves of movement and problems in some districts but are expected to create barely a ripple in the Placentia Yorba Linda Unified School District.

Superintendent James Fleming said he doesn't think the open-enrollment laws will present problems regarding mass shifting. But Fleming said the new laws could put the district in the role as the bad guy as the district tries to maintain ethnic balance in its schools.

But, Fleming said, "On one hand, the district wants students to attend whatever school they want but it also has to follow the law and prevent white flight."

Fleming said 37 percent of his district has minority enrollment.

School board president Bill Kielty also doesn't see many students shifting schools because "there has always been strong support for neighborhood schools."

Also, Kielty said, while the students may have a greater freedom, it comes with a price tag. According to the bill, transportation out of a school's regular attendance area is the responsibility of parents.

COFFEE: 'A place to hang out and not worry' the uninitiated, the bands are popular among fans of music played on college radio stations.

Jamie Erickson — a 19-year-old clad in a baggy pair of blue-jeans, white T-shirt and a silver ankh dangling around his neck — called Cafe Nove more than a place to hang out.

"I come here to be with my friends and to stay up on current events, discussions and what is new in music," he said, slowly nursing a cup of cinnamon-flavored coffee. "Besides, where local can you go that will let someone under 21 go in?"

Erickson is exactly the kind of person Cafe Nove is targeting. The coffeehouse opened last March in hopes of attracting insomniacs and teen-agers bored with going to the movies every night, Knight said.

Kara Borden stares into her iced cappucino, debating with friends if she could handle another one.

"I've had four," the 18-year-old said. "They can be pretty potent."

Borden skips getting another and opts to light a cigarette outside. Smoking isn't allowed inside the coffeehouse because it could be absorbed into the beans, one of the workers said.

Later, she plans to get in on a discussion.

"Sometimes the arguments get pretty intense here. Everyone is friends of course, but we like to talk about things. Anything that is in the news ... it can be very lively," Borden said.

"It might also be the caffeine, I'm not sure."

VOICES

Here's what City Council members said Tuesday to support their decision on increasing the city's utility tax from 3 percent to 4 percent. Mayor Maria Moreno cast the lone dissenting vote.

"We got a different answer as to how much the state would take out daily. The state did a number on us. They made us look stupid in front of the people we were elected to serve ... I don't known what we would have done without this tax."

— Councilman John Tynes

"Those people — from the governor on down on both sides of the aisle — are bums. It takes a lot of revenue to maintain the kind of services provided in Placentia ... and the services are why we moved here."

— Councilman Norman Eckenrode

"This is a hard decision to make. We have sat down and gone over this every day. The numbers (provided by the state) were never solid, so we were working under some real handicaps."

— Councilwoman Carol Downey

"I've talked to the young, the old, retired, poor and people of different ethnic groups on this tax — it does not discriminate. We've heard people on both sides and that's important to democracy. I will vote to raise this today to protect the services we enjoy here in Placentia."

— Councilman Michael Maertzweiler

"Hopefully we can agree to disagree. I'm for police and would never suggest cutting back. With the amount the state is taking away, I think we could have cut more of the fat from the budget."

— Mayor Maria Moreno

Taxes: So much to say against this legal plunder

Much has been said in these columns lately about taxes — more specifically about the proliferation of approved or proposed new areas of legal extortion of private capital, and the increase in existing taxes. We cannot help ourselves. There is so much to say about the subject.

So far, much of what has been debated has involved local tax issues, such as the new-found "deep pockets" of utility taxes recently imposed by some north Orange County cities and the raising of the utility tax rates in cities which already had the tax in place.

The expostulation against the utility tax issue has been widespread, though not unanimous. The anger was still raging among many remonstrators to the utility tax when another tax bombshell struck. Postcards informing north county residents that the Orange County Vector Control District plans to raise its fees to all property owners apparently has struck a nerve among many overburdened taxpayers.

Rumblings throughout north Orange County appear to be more thundering than those targeted against the utility tax brouhaha. Three reasons for objecting to the vector district fee hike have surfaced. One is the hike itself. Another is the manner in which the district announced its intentions to increase the fee (information printed on a post card in agate type that was difficult to read). The third is a belief that the vector district does very little to enhance the quality of life in the county.

Some remember when the vector control district was more visible. They remember the days of periodic neighborhood sprayings to control common insect pests. Today, they see little of this visibility.

So far, taxpayers have targeted local officials to vent their outrage. Perhaps they should be aiming at a more appropriate target — the state Legislature. The local tax controversy, it should be understood, is primarily the fault of the state and not local officials, who are taking the heat. Nobody wants their taxes raised. Certainly they don't want to be saddled with new taxes. But with state officials plundering local funds, raising local taxes is the only alternative most public officials believe they have. Going to a barebones budget rarely enters their minds.

If area citizens are upset about their local tax picture, they should take a long look a what the ripoff artists of the

The state budget fiasco: Placing the proper blame

By Don J. Clever
Editorial and commentary director

SB 1135 is the bill that raids local government revenues, obligates the average California family to paying $500 to the state that otherwise would have stayed at home to fund community services — more notably police and fire protection. The measure shifts $2.8 billion of your local property taxes to pay for state obligations. Want to know who's responsible, locally? The Assembly vote on the measure was close so every AYE vote was decisive. Here's the breakdown of how YOUR representives voted (remember each AYE vote is a vote approving ripoff of YOUR local taxes):

Voting for the measure were north Orange County representatives, Mickey Conroy, R-71st District; Curt Pringle, R-68th District; and Tom Umberg, D-69th District. Their constituents might want to send these "representatives" a great big thank you for their part in the big property tax ripoff. Voting NO were Doris Allen, R-67th District; Gil Ferguson, R-

Utility tax goes for wrong priorities

Twenty-three years ago, the Placentia City Council reluctantly passed an ordinance levying a utility tax to cover the cost of building the civic center complex — an estimated $1.8 million. Its clear understanding was that, odious and burdensome as it seemed at the time, it was merely a temporary measure to be repealed as soon as the debt was paid.

Nearly a quarter of a century later, this tax is still appearing on our monthly gas, electric, telephone and now cable bills. How did that happen? Well, obviously, the debt is still outstanding. In fact,

ISSUES/ ANSWERS

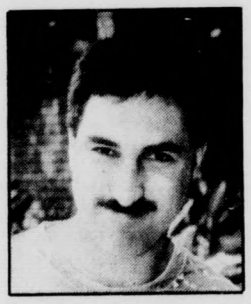
GAY POWER

President Clinton recently approved a policy to allow gays to serve in the military as long as they keep their sexual orientation to themselves.

QUESTION: Do you think gays should be allowed to serve openly in the military?

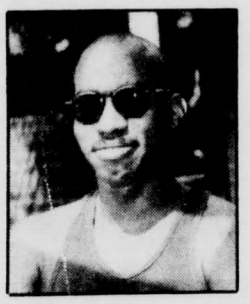
Asked at Placentia City Hall

Cheryl Cisneros, 21, wife and mother
"There should be a separate military for the gays and laws to protect them."



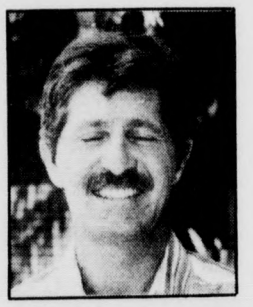
Robert Kandel, 32, engineer
"Yes. They have been there since the beginning of the military."

Brian Duffy, 17, recreation leader
"Yes. But it would be a problem for everyone in the military if they did."



David Duncan, 36, library assistant
"They should keep it to themselves. It would cause a problem among the troops."

Gary Kaufman, 29, sales
"I think if they want to they should, but they will suffer the consequences."



Bruce Lomheim, 41, self-employed
"Clinton should study history and see that George Washington said that gays would destroy the military."

70th District; Ross Johnson, R-72nd District; and Bill Morrow, R-73rd District.

The bill had an easier time in the state Senate. All three north county state senators, John R. Lewis, R-33rd District; Rob Hurtt, R-32nd District; and Marian Bergeson, R-35th District, voted yes.

It's nice to know that so many north county's legislators are looking out for the good people who reside here — and who voted them into office as THEIR representatives.

amazingly two-thirds of the debt is as yet unpaid. Hard to believe, but in all that time, while $14 million has been collected through the tax, only $600,000 has gone toward repaying the original purpose of that burden on the books and our back. The moneys, of course, were used for almost any and everything BUT repayment of the loan.

Now the residents are being asked to quietly, willingly, go along with a proposed 66 percent increase in the utility tax. Why? Obviously to support the sound, conservative fiscal management of our hard-earned dollars we have come to respect and appreciate.

POLITICAL DIPPERS:

FROM 10

state of California are doing to their paychecks. Despite claims from Sacramento that the state budget contains "no new taxes," the fact is that the budget imposes one of the largest tax increases in the state's history — $1.5 billion. So says Tom McClintock, director of the Center for the California Taxpayer.

McClintock points out the most obvious of these increases as being the broken promise that the half-cent "temporary" sales tax increase imposed in 1991 will be extended six months. Then there's another "temporary" quarter-cent sales tax imposed in 1991.

Renters earning less than $41,000 can expect their income taxes to rise $120 per couple next year because of suspension of the renter's tax credit, according to McClintock.

He also noted that appellate court fees and court reporter fees will increase $3 million; community college students will pay an extra $40 million next year; CSU students will see a 10 percent boost in tuition and UC students a 22 percent hike, for a total of $200 million.

A business tax credit geared as an incentive for employers to provide health care for workers, has been eliminated. It represents $120 million in business taxes next year, McClintock says, and $450 million the following year. And manufacturers can kiss goodbye their promised sales tax exemption for business equipment purchases, a vital reform if California's manufacturing exodus is ever to be staunched.

Add the $2.6 billion raid on local government funds, one could get the notion that any municipal tax hikes are really state tax hikes in disguise.

Shouldn't most of the taxpayer wrath, therefore, be directed at the people responsible for their predicament — the legislators in Sacramento? Maybe a recall pipeline should be laid from north Orange County to the state Capitol.

Many things of interest coming up

Took a look at my calendar the other day and could not believe August is here. It's a mystery to me as to where the first seven months of this year went. Didn't we just drive by the high schools and see "Good luck, grads" signs out front? And I don't know about you but I'm ready for another vacation. But, hold on a minute, can't be leaving town just yet — there's a lot going on and a number of things coming up that will interest Placentia people.

Placentia's Founder's Society and member Pat Mercier hosted the first Bradford House Bride's Tea on July 18. Did you happen to see the round tables outside on the front lawn with the umbrellas and the softly billowing white tablecloths?

But Pat is best in telling us about the day. "Over 70 former brides and their guests enjoyed tea on the front lawn. It was wonderful! Women dressed in summer dresses, many wore beautiful hats, and all were seated under white umbrellas, which had netting tied to the posts with pink bows. Each guest received a gift bag of potpourri with a card tied to it indicating the event and date."

Pat said that Victorian Catering provided a wonderful selection of the most creative tea sandwiches, cut in various shapes, and so many of them that making a selection was difficult. Dave Musgrove, chamber executive director and a big Bradford House supporter, played the piano during the entire event.

PERSONALITY

Lessons in innovation

Irene Patrick is a semi-finalist in county teacher of year competition

By Barbara Giasone
North County News

Storytime in Irene Patrick's kindergarten class holds more surprises than Dr. Seuss' "Cat in the Hat."

A parent, doubling as a research scientist, arrives with a wagonload of experiments ready to dazzle the children with colorful, bubbling liquids.

A father, who works at a donut store, scores a hit with samples of his baked goods, asking the children to ice the treats.

The drapery store owner brings along miniature tape measures for little hands to figure inches. The postal carrier shares his load of information.

But that's only half the fun at John Tynes School in Placentia. For the first 15 minutes of the half-hour program, each guest is asked to read a favorite story to the class.

Patrick says her "Celebrity Readers" project has gained in popularity, drawing such diverse personalities as a Desert Storm soldier, the superintendent of schools and a library worker.

The innovative program is one of a variety of creative activities that has led Patrick to semi-finalist status in the Orange County Teacher of the Year race. The winner will be announced in September.

"Kids today still enjoy being read to, and our guest readers stress how important reading is in the work force," says Patrick, enjoying summer vacation in her Fullerton home.

"And the kids today have basically the same developmental patterns as when I started teaching 37 years ago. Sure, they know more about dangerous strangers, how to call 9-1-1, the bad effects of drugs and smoking. But they're just as open to learning as ever."

To help maintain quality education in the Placentia Yorba Linda Unified School District, Patrick developed district-wide courses, wrote the kindergarten handbook and stressed full inclusion of the handicapped in the classroom.

Last year, she welcomed three disabled children into her class: one student in a wheelchair, another in a walker and the third with a hidden handicap.

"When the psychologist came to visit the disabled children, she couldn't find them because they were so fully integrated into the classroom study," Patrick recalls. "During the year I brought in an extra wheelchair and walker to let the children experience what it's like to be confined. If they chose to use them, they had to spend the entire day, recess and all, in the equipment.

"The response was wonderful," she adds.

At Tynes School, Patrick sponsored student council, directed the John Tynes singers, wrote musicals and a grant for the Healthy Start program. She also inaugurated the Big Friend, Little Friend project.

Patrick readily commends her volunteer parents who arrive regularly to help with various projects.

And she's quick to thank husband, Jim, who built plexiglass, see-through paint easels, cubbies for storage and individual clipboards for children to jot down notes during nature walks.

Patrick traces her love for young children to her father, who spent quality time with the family in their Pennsylvania home. When Irene was in high school, she volunteered at a maternity home, feeding the handicapped children warehoused inside. In addition, she worked at Girl Scout camps, and at the Little Sister of the Poor home for the elderly where she donated her ironing services.

After graduating from Marywood College, she and a girlfriend signed a teaching contact in California where she met her first husband. She taught in Long Beach for nine years, retiring to raise sons Christopher and Matthew.

When her husband died, the pastor of her church asked Patrick to develop a kindergarten curriculum. She complied, and stayed five years until she met Jim Patrick, an engineer from Fullerton.

"After marrying 14 years ago, I retired once more and started helping in my sons' classrooms," she says. "Pretty soon, I was substituting again when I found Tynes School. I realized kindergarten was my love, and I wanted to teach full-time again."

Tynes Principal Beth Berndt, who nominated Patrick for the county teaching award, outlined the nominee's excellent teaching skills and enthusiasm.

Stan Bird/North County News

Irene Patrick, a semi-finalist for Orange County Teacher of the Year, spends her summer planning a new curriculum for her kindergarten class at John Tynes School in Placentia. Patrick was nominated by Principal Beth Berndt.

To further qualify for the honor, Patrick wrote essays on the philosopy of teaching, educational issues and trends and why the teaching profession is rewarding.

While waiting for the judges' decisions, she is gearing up for fall activities with Fullerton Branch, American Association of University Women, North Fullerton Homeowner's Assoication and antiquing for mesh evening bags.

She's also planning new curriculum for the 30-plus children ready to take their first step inside a classroom.

"I've already made plans for show and tell," she says. "I'm going to ask every child to bring some dirt from places they visit. Last year, I brought seashells from Florida and we learned about the ocean."

And more celebrity readers will be on tap to bring a wealth of new adventures to Irene Patrick's surprise reading program.

APRIL

FROM 12

Fashions of Main Street was modeled by Leslie Brown, Laura Black, Brenda Chyr and their moms. Following the fashion show, an assortment of Victorian desserts were served. Brides and guests touring the house were impressed with the historical clothing presented by the Textile and Costume Guild of Fullerton's Museum Center. The truly memorable afternoon was planned by three former Bradford brides: Brenda Chyr, Leslie Brown and Laura Black. They would agree a pat on the back goes to Pat for all of her help.

Not a mystery anymore about who the new officers are for the Placentia Stars Chapter of the American Business Womens Association. They are Marlene Montooth, president; Nancy Ince, vice president; Pam Tancordo, secretary; and Lynn Tadlock counts the money. The Stars meet at 6:30 p.m. the fourth Tuesday, at Days Inn in Fullerton.

But wait, I'm told there's still a mystery, "Mystery on the Range." The setting is the late 1800s in the Wild West. You're invited to solve the mystery of the murder of a widow. This is where the fun begins. To find out who's guilty, who had the motive and how it was done, be there Saturday at 5 p.m. For mystery-solving reservations (includes a map to the "ranch" and grub buffet), call Carol Peterson at 529-7979.

Where is she? No mystery. Tara Brown is in Tatebayshi, Japan. She's there as a representative for Rotary International as part of the youth exchange program. After summer, she will return and enroll at Fullerton College. Proud parents are Charles and Carlee Brown.

City Council members solved the mystery of who is going to be the newest members of the city's commissions and committees. After much thought and quick deliberations, they made the following appointments: Michael White, Cultural Arts Commission; Bruce Hunt, Robert Turner, and Kerri Fenstemaker, Parks and Recreation Commission; Shellie Bilhartz and Mark Albertson, Traffic Safety Commission; Carl Van Gordon and Carol Downey, Civic Center committee; and Patricia Shoemaker, Planning Commission.

No mystery to "who loves ya?" Don and Carol Jeanson celebrated their 20th wedding anniversary. Jim and Norma Bardwell also did some wedding anniversary celebrating.

Who has an Orange County Fair third place ribbon for her painting? Kate Horton that's who.

And it's a mystery to a lot of local fans why the Rams don't make it to the Super Bowl. But it's not for the lack of cheering from Andra Carter. She's a member of the Rams cheerleading team again this year.

RECIPE OF THE WEEK

HOME ALONE

Relish moment with quiet dinner just for you or share with someone special

The time is finally right. Whether the busy work week is over, visiting guests have said "goodbye," that long-awaited vacation day has arrived or the kids are visiting grandparents, you finally have some time for yourself. Relish the moment by preparing a special meal just for yourself ... and, perhaps, one invited guest.

Celebrate with steak, especially wonderful in spicy Steak with Vegetable Creole. The night before, combine chopped tomatoes, corn, sliced celery, bell pepper and green onions. Add oil; season with thyme, instant beef-flavor bouillon and hot pepper sauce to perk up this colorful medley. Cover and chill for several hours. When it's time for dinner, grill the steak — basting frequently with a seasoned bottled lemon juice and oil brushing sauce — and serve with the tempting vegetable creole. Add your favorite side dishes and the most decadent dessert you know for a truly outstanding dinner.

Another special main course that doesn't take hours of preparation is delicious Honey and Apple Pork Tenderloin. Simply brown thin slices of pork tenderloin, adding a delectable combination of brown sugar, honey, bottled lemon juice, mustard and instant chicken-flavor bouillon. Add apple slices and simmer everything for a few minutes. Top with toasted chopped pecans for an elegant entree perfect for an intimate dinner.

If you're looking for comfort food, but enjoy contemporary recipes, try Three-Cheese Turkey Cannelloni for your special meal. Combine mozzarella, provolone and ricotta cheese with chopped broccoli, enhancing the mixture with zesty instant chicken-flavor bouillon. Mix well, spoon on boneless fresh turkey breast slices, roll up and secure with wooden picks. Place in a baking dish and top with tasty, tomato-and-basil pasta sauce. While the pasta-less cannelloni bakes to a bubbly golden brown, mix up your favorite salad and grate some Parmesan cheese for garnishing. Get ready to enjoy a wonderfully satisfying meal.

When the time is right, set out the candles, turn on your favorite music and indulge with easily prepared meals featuring big-time taste. What better way to treat yourself, or yourself and someone special, than with memorable meals sure to warm the body and spirit.

STEAK with VEGETABLE CREOLE

1½ cups chopped tomatoes
½ cup frozen corn, thawed and drained
¼ cup sliced celery
¼ cup chopped green bell pepper
¼ cup sliced green onions
2 teaspoons vegetable oil
1½ teaspoons beef-flavor instant bouillon
¼ teaspoon thyme leaves
⅛ to ¼ teaspoon hot pepper sauce
1 pound sirloin steak

In medium bowl, combine all ingredients except steak. Cover; chill several hours. Serve with grilled meat. Grill or broil meat 5 minutes on each side or to desired doneness, basting frequently with brushing sauce. Makes two servings. Refrigerate leftovers.

Brushing sauce: In small bowl, combine 2 tablespoons bottled lemon juice, 1 tablespoon vegetable oil, 1 teaspoon beef-flavor instant bouillon, ¼ teaspoon garlic powder and ¼ teaspoon thyme leaves. Let stand five minutes or until bouillon dissolves.

HONEY & APPLE PORK TENDERLOIN

½ pound pork tenderloin, thinly sliced
1 tablespoon margarine or butter
2 tablespoons brown sugar
2 tablespoons honey
2 tablespoons bottled lemon juice
1 tablespoon Dijon-style mustard
2 teaspoons cornstarch
2 teaspoons chicken-flavor instant bouillon
1 medium apple, cored and sliced
2 to 3 tablespoons toasted chopped pecans

In medium skillet, brown meat in margarine. In small bowl, combine sugar, honey, bottled lemon juice, mustard, cornstarch and bouillon. Pour over meat in skillet; add apple slices. Reduce heat; cover and simmer 5 minutes. Top with pecans. Makes two servings. Refrigerate leftovers.

Celebrate being alone with steak, especially wonderful in spicy Steak with Vegetable Creole.

THREE-CHEESE TURKEY CANNELLONI

½ cup shredded mozzarella cheese
½ cup shredded Provolone cheese
½ cup ricotta cheese
½ cup frozen chopped broccoli, thawed and well drained
1 teaspoon chicken-flavor instant bouillon
4 boneless fresh turkey breast slices
1 (26-ounce) jar flavored pasta sauce
Grated Parmesan cheese

Preheat oven to 325 degrees. In small bowl, combine mozzarella, Provolone and ricotta cheese, broccoli and bouillon; mix well. Spoon about ½ cup mixture on each turkey slice. Roll up and secure with wooden picks. Place turkey rolls in 1-quart baking dish; top with pasta sauce. Cover; bake 35 minutes. Garnish with Parmesan cheese. Makes two servings. Refrigerate leftovers.

Stovetop, cookware must match like peas in a pot

You've done it! That snazzy new cooktop you've been eyeing is now installed in your kitchen. But something's wrong. Those pots and pans you acquired as a wedding gift years ago seem to rock and roll instead of sitting flat on the stovetop.

According to home economists from Whirlpool Corp., you probably have a case of incompatibility between aging pots and pans and a modern cooktop.

"New cooking surfaces of glass, cast iron or high-efficiency electric coils need medium- to heavy-gauge metal pans with perfectly flat bottoms," they report.

"Thin, warped or dented pans, and utensils with lip edges or ridges on the bottom not only heat slowly and waste energy, they can actually damage a cooktop," home economists warn.

To help you choose the right cookware for your new cooktop, they offer these tips:

First, read the cooktop's Use and Care Guide. Most manufacturers recommend types of cookware that will give good results.

Next, check out the kinds of materials used in cookware, and decide which will work best on your cooktop. For example:

■ Aluminum heats quickly and evenly and is well-suited for boiling, frying, braising and simmering. It's also available with or without non-stick finishes.

■ Triple-ply stainless and stainless steel with an aluminum or copper core or bottom distributes heat evenly and has overall cooking characteristics much like aluminum.

■ Cast iron is slow to heat, but cooks evenly once it reaches temperature. It works well for slow, low-heat cooking or for browning and frying. Utensils are generally quite heavy.

■ Glass-ceramic, earthenware and heat-proof glass can be used for surface cooking only if the cooktop manufacturer recommends them. They work best on low to medium temperature settings. Don't use glass utensils that require the use of a wire trivet or grid on glass-ceramic or solid element cooktops.

■ Porcelain enamel (on steel or cast iron) should be used according to cooktop manufacturer's instructions. Never let enamel utensils boil dry. Melted porcelain is very difficult to remove from the cooktop surface.

WOMEN

Mastering menopause

Controlling the quality of life, health, attitude, nutrition is key

By Barbara Giasone
North County News

Six years ago when Betsy Trundle joined friends at the bridge table, she suffered in silence. She wasn't about to share her battles with near-manic emotions nor gradual weight loss brought on by a natural occurence in her life.

"The women didn't think twice talking about their sex lives and money problems," said Trundle, now a motivational speaker on the subject. "But never menopause. They didn't want to talk about getting old."

Raised in Virginia Beach, Trundle recalled mothers with a Southern Belle attitude never spoke to their daughters about change of life. "Even my own mother isn't comfortable with me on the national speaking circuit addressing menopause."

Trundle, who recently co-chaired a "Mastering Menopause" seminar with Fullerton physician Dr. Nicholas Thanos, said it took her from age 49 to 53 to realize she could control her quality of life, monitoring her own health, attitude and nutrition.

"Ten years from now, menopausal women will go on hormone replacement therapy like diabetics go on insulin," Trundle predicted.

In her talk, Trundle recounted the story of a Virginia woman who was so depressed, her ability to concentrate declined. She was forced to give up her professional writing assignments for six months. After being put on hormone replacement therapy (HRT), "she would give up anything except her hormones."

Thanos, who treats several hundred menopausal-age women annually, said today's woman isn't getting enough menopausal information from her doctor.

"Some are too intimidated to ask, and most doctors don't volunteer information," Thanos said. "But there's help out there."

Thanos said symptoms occur usually between the ages of 40 and 55 with 51 being the average age of onset. He often listens to complaints of irregular menstrual cycles, hot flashes and mood swings.

"I attempt to dispel concerns that HRT leads to cancer. Women are deathly afraid of the word cancer," Thanos said. "But they don't realize if they don't get enough hormones, osteoporosis can set it. And if they fracture a hip, one-third of those women will never get out of a wheelchair."

Middle-aged women have additional concerns. Women in their 40s have the same rate of unplanned pregnancy as teen-agers, eight of every 10, according to doctors at Duke University Medical Center.

The surprising statistic is linked to perimenopause, the gradual biologcal process in which the ovaries reduce their production of the female sex hormones estrogen and progestin. During the transitional periods, levels of estrogen and progestin fluctuate unpredictably, causing irregular menstrual cycles and sporadic ovulation.

While these women get their periods, they can also get pregnant. Dr. Arthur Haney, director of reproductive endocrinology at Duke, said women over 40 have a need for contraception. In 1990, the Food and Drug Administration changed the labeling for oral contraceptives to permit their use in healthy non-smoking women over 40.

For a free booklet on perimenopause, write to the Parke-Davis Female Health Care Information Center, 301 E. 57th St., New York, NY 10022.

Adding to menopausal woes, approximately 40 percent of menopausal and postmenopausal women — 28 million — suffer from inadequate vaginal lubrication.

Although more and more are discussing the problem with doctors, others are reluctant to bring up the subject due to emotional sensitivity.

For women not taking HRT, a solution sometimes is found in personal lubricants. Most come in forms of gels, creams and inserts. One brand, Lubrin, simulates the body's natural lubrication, is water soluble and lasts for hours.

"After you're 50 years old, they say you are no longer counting the days you've been here, but how many days you have left," Trundle said. "Living takes on an interesting focus at menopause; it has more poignancy. When days have numbers, their value increases."

Atention lefties

Southpaws take the spotlight Aug. 13 at the 18th annual International Lefthanders Day, sponsored by Lefthanders International.

"It's a day lefties can set aside to do everything with their left hands. The point is to remind people of the inconveniences and negative attitudes met by lefthanders every day," said Dean Campbell, LHI founder.

The date, Friday the 13th, was chosen to poke fun at the myths and superstitions surounding lefthandedness.

Cancer fight

Young Professionals Against Cancer will host the fourth annual "Toast on the Coast" Aug. 14 at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in Dana Point.

The event begins at 6:30 p.m., featuring a cocktail hour, Hawaiian-themed dinner and dancing until midnight.

Tickets are $55 for members, $65 for non-members and at the door. Call (714) 751-0441 for reservations and information.

Wisdom teeth: Should they go?

By Samuel J. Poidmore, D.D.S.

Developing wisdom teeth (third molars), often fail to erupt into the dental arches and become impacted.

More than 90 percent of the population has insufficient jaw size to accommodate a full complement of 32 teeth.

Most often, the impacting of wisdom teeth is caused by insufficient jaw growth leading to lack of space behind the second molar teeth.

Teeth usually maintain an active eruption potential throughout life and usually erupt in the direction of their long axis.

The eruptive forces that direct a wisdom tooth into a deficient space are capable of causing crowding and malalignment of adjacent teeth, together with regional and sometime systemic, pathological disorders.

Wisdom teeth are located in the areas of the jaws which harbor many types of bacteria.

Infections associated with impacted wisdom teeth may cause pain, swelling and inability to open the jaws and in some cases even life threatening complications.

Because the blood supply is more plentiful and bone structure is less dense in patients under the age of 25 years, early removal of wisdom teeth is desirable.

The highly refined surgical techniques and sterile equipment employed by oral and maxillofacial surgeons have almost eliminated any post operative complications.

Apprehension is easily eliminated through the use of intravenous sedation and light general anesthesia techniques.

Dr. Samuel J. Poidmore is a dentist with offices at 400 W. Central, No. 109, Brea. He can be reached at (714) 529-0043.

Surgery only way to repair droopy eyelids

By Rex A. Yannis, M.D.

Droopy eyelids (sometimes called a lazy eye), is called blepharoptosis. It occurs when the upper eyelid does not open fully. The medical name is often shortened to ptosis.

In children the condition is often present at birth. Some may think it is the result of birth trauma but this is almost never the cause.

The condition is called congenital or infantile ptosis and is almost always caused by poor muscle function of the levator muscle which pulls up the upper eyelid. Children with the condition have a muscle which is poorly developed. It can happen in one or both eyes. It happens equally in boys and girls and often there is a hereditary component to the condition.

Children with this condition have an upper eyelid that partially opens. There is a great deal of variation from a minimal amount of 0.5mm to complete closure.

The droopy eyelid will cause the child to tilt his head back and lift his eyebrows. If the eyelid covers the pupil of one eye and the other eye is not covered, the brain will turn off the signal from the covered eye and the vision can be permanently decreased, causing amblyopia. This condition can be corrected by opening the covered eye and patching the "good" eye. This almost never happens when both eyelids are droopy. The head tilt in these children can cause difficulty in walking.

Surgical correction is the only treatment available for this condition. It is important to properly time the surgery for best results. I like to wait until the child is from 2 to 3 years old before doing any surgery because the child can cooperate with an examination. I also like to perform surgery before the child starts school because other children often ridicule another child who looks different.

There are various surgical approaches to correct blepharoptosis. The type of surgery depends on how much the child can move the upper eyelid. If there is moderate to good muscle function, the levator muscle is shortened according to how much ptosis is present and how much muscle function is present.

If the muscle function is poor, the eyebrow muscle is used to open the eyes.

Depression is a treatable illness

Almost every hour and a half an elderly person in this country commits suicide. In as many as two-thirds of these cases, the underlying cause of suicide may be depression, a treatable emotional illness.

Because of the debilitating and often fatal consequences of depression, Yorba Hills Hospital & Mental Health Center is trying to increase awareness and provide assistance to the elderly.

"By accurately identifying depression in the elderly and getting depressed individuals to seek the professional help they need, many can experience relief from their symptoms. Many troubling symptoms, such as forgetfulness, inactivity and deterioration in physical condition, can be reversed, and this special time of life can become far happier and more rewarding," said Steven James, M.D.

If an elderly person has exhibited several of these behaviors for two weeks or more, the individual, a friend or relative should consider contacting a licensed physician or psychologist to arrange for a diagnostic evaluation:

- Feelings of worthlessness, helplessness
- Persistent sadness, anxiety, or inappropriate guilt

Depression can lead to thoughts of suicide, a major risk for the elderly who have the highest suicide rate in the country. Each year, 6,000 older Americans kill themselves. Unlike younger people, the elderly do not attempt suicide impulsively. They plan it carefully over the course of months. This results in a very high rate of actual suicides. By recognizing the following signs that a person is contemplating suicide, family or friends can intervene in time:

- Mention of desire to die
- Self-denigrating comments such as "my family would be better off without me"
- Neglect of self-care, personal hygiene
- A sudden interest in putting affairs in order
- The giving away of possessions
- A sudden interest or disinterest in religion

If you observe any of these behaviors it is important to contact a medical or mental health professional immediately (such as your family doctor, local psychiatric hospital or an emergency room) to arrange for an evaluation to determine if the individual is at risk of hurting him/her self.

What do you do if you think you have depression?

- Understand that your sadness and behaviors are not a character flaw or weakness. They are an illness and one that can be successfully treated.
- Don't accept your symptoms of sadness, forgetfulness and sleep problems as an unavoidable part of aging. You can feel better. Consult with your family physician or geriatric care center to arrange for a diagnostic evaluation with a licensed psychiatrist or psychologist.
- While depression rarely goes away by itself, there are steps to take to improve outlook. Maintain regular physical examinations, a physician-approved exercise regimen, good nutrition, and a supportive network of family, friends and social service professionals.

What do you do if you think an elderly person you care for has depression?

- Encourage or arrange for a diagnostic evaluation with a qualified professional to accurately determine the cause of the symptoms.
- Provide support, love, and encouragement to offset the person's loss of self-esteem.
- Help ease the sense of isolation and withdrawal by spending time with the person.

Cypress Pops Orchestra has talent, support, desire, and will perform for free

By Rachel Tuinstra
North County News

In an age when orchestras are in debt and dying, John E. Hall III and his wife, Marie Hall, decided that an orchestra was just what the city of Cypress needed. With Marie's business sense and John's artistic ability, they figured anything was possible.

As the Cypress Pops Orchestra moves into its fifth successful season, it seems they were right.

The community-based orchestra was conceived with the idea that the audience would be entertained as well as enlightened — without having to pay for it.

That idea does not lend itself to a very flexible budget, but the Halls believed that with some careful management the Pops concerts would be open to everyone.

Starting off with no funds and few musicians wasn't easy, said Marie, who serves as president of the orchestra's board of directors. "It was a challenge to get (donors) to have enough faith to believe in us."

Finally, after a lot of research and study as ammunition, they were able to get a sizeable grant from Target stores.

"I felt what we were doing wasn't unrealistic. It could be attained," Marie said.

They soon realized that with such stiff competition as radio, television and movies, an evening at the symphony simply failed to attract a large audience.

So they decided on a pops orchestra, which would feature current music as well as classical overtures and concertos, instead of a symphony orchestra that may seem directed only to the elite.

"Symphony orchestras are a dying breed," said director and conductor John Hall. "There's too much symphonic repertory. People don't enjoy classical music that much.

Hall said he also wants to educate young people about the joy of music by offering children's concerts. "It's a very enlightening experience," he said.

Relying on fund-raisers and donations from patrons and corporations, and keeping a careful eye on finances, the Pops Orchestra has managed to stay out of the red.

"We would cancel a performance before we go into deficit," Hall said.

To keep afloat, the orchestra has put on such fund-raisers as a city rummage sale, a fashion show and a musical soiree.

There's also talk of producing a compact disc featuring the orchestra.

While generous grants from Target, Mitsubishi, Panasonic, the city's Parks and Recreation Department and patrons have helped considerably, eliminating such amenities as advertising has kept revenue up.

"Ninety-four percent of the money goes to putting on concerts. Very little goes toward administration," Hall said.

Hall says he sees great things ahead, including more income and bigger audiences.

Most importantly, the orchestra would like to find a permanent home. "We want a place to live in," Hall said.

John Hall III is conductor of the Cypress Pops Orchestra, which is now in its fifth season.

Music always a part of conductor's life

By Rachel Tuinstra
North County News

When John Hall III speaks of music, his eyes close and a soft smile comes to his face.

It is through music that he is able to express what cannot be said in words. It is as if he can hear the music of his life inside his head.

Slowly his hands raise to the position in which they are most comfortable. That of a translator of music. That of a conductor.

Music has always been a big part of Hall's life. He began playing in orchestras in high school and got his first taste of conducting in college. However, it didn't click, so he moved on to instrumental music.

After graduating from California State University, Long Beach, Hall won a scholarship to the Julliard School of Music in New York. There he had the chance to observe some great conductors such as Alfred Wallenstein, Leopold Stokowski, Jean More, Sir John Prichard, Robert Shaw and Herbert Blomsted.

He later toured in Europe for a year and played with Placido Domingo. Although his career seemed to be progressing smoothly, he felt unfulfilled. "I became very frustrated with being an instrumentalist," Hall said. "You can be limited, and you may not have the opportunity to express yourself."

"My husband is a very warm and sincere person," said Hall's wife, Marie. "He has this ability and he wants to share it."

A need to give is what led John and Marie to co-

CURTAIN CALL

'Wizard' is long but entertaining for most

Young performers energetic as well as enthusiastic

By Peggy O'Hara
For the North County News

Following the plot and using the music from the MGM classic, the Broadway on Tour production of "The Wizard of Oz" has all the characters you know and love — Dorothy, Toto, the Scarecrow, Tinman and Cowardly Lion.

Dan Halkyard's children's theater company, performing at The City Shopping Center in Orange, has a cast that ranges from very young to young teen-agers. A few of them can claim professional experience in modeling, television and even movies.

Many of them are Broadway on Tour veterans who have performed in other Orange County educational and community theater productions. A few are making their stage debut. They are all enthusiastic, energetic and eager to please.

Parents of the performers have contributed untold hours of assistance in this production and continue as ticket vendors, dressers, drivers and all the other thankless jobs that go with children's theater.

In addition to his production and direction, Halkyard has tapped the talents of vocal director John Massey Jr., choreographer Kimber Jacobs, costumer Laurie Holden and set designer Neil Caplin.

More than four dozen actors participate in this show with most of the leads being double cast. Snowflakes, jitterbugs, winged monkeys, talking trees, and a most captivating cast of Munchkins keep the story interesting, if not always consistent.

"Somewhere Over the Rainbow," "Yellow Brick Road," "We're Off to See the Wizard" and all the favorite songs are included in this "Wizard."

Despite the delightful children, and the best efforts of all involved, this production is flawed. Among the three cardinal rules of children's theater is "keep it short."

Although this production of Broadway on Tour has action, change of venue and great costuming, it has also tried to give every performer maximum participation. The result is an overlong first act that stifles the interest and endurance of some of the audience.

For those with a longer attention span it offers a great variety of scenes, songs and dances. However, the program lists 24 scenes for the first act and 50 for the second.

Be sure to allow plenty of time for this two-act musical that continues through Aug. 15. Weekend performances at 7:30 p.m. continue through Aug. 14 with four matinees at 2:30 p.m. through Aug. 15.

For tickets and information call 385-1555.

Robyn (Naylor) Hamachek was a producer, promoter, director and choreographer at the age of 11. She began performing at the age of 8 in Downey Civic Light Opera productions.

A year later she was also a Girl Scout volunteer for the mentally retarded in her hometown. Through her productions of her original scripts of "Hansel and Gretel" and "The Wizard of Oz" she contributed money to the Southeast Association for Retarded Children.

Since that time she has not only completed her education in theater, but has always been involved in acting, choreographing and directing.

A Yorba Linda resident for more than 12 years, she is well known as one of that city's most active volunteers for theater in the elementary schools. From 1988 through this year, she has produced and or directed almost 20 musicals for schools and the recreation department in Yorba Linda.

Now through the Yorba Linda Recreation Department, she will be teaching two theatrical camps at the Travis Ranch Activity Center. A commercial, photo modeling class for ages 8 and up runs Aug. 16 through Aug. 20. Drama camp runs Aug. 30 continuing through Sept. 3 for students 7 years old and up.

Enrollment must be made through the recreation department and information can be obtained by calling 961-7160.

found the Cypress Pops Orchestra. Going into a fifth successful season, Marie confides that she is "extremely proud of their achievement," adding, "It's almost unbelievable."

Together and with lots of hard work, the orchestra has grown from 22 members to 55. The orchestra's free concerts attract close to 2,000 people, some from as far away as Beverly Hills. "He's always had this dream," Marie said. "He wants to give."

As a conductor, John Hall must face the music straight on, using each instrument's potential to wow the audience.

"A conductor is a musical interpreter, teacher and psychologist," Hall said. "I think a conductor has to be inspirational."

Being at the head of the orchestra is very different then being inside it. "You are at a different vantage point, you hear it differently," said Hall. "It's wonderful to have the orchestra playing at you."

MOVIE REVIEW

'Men in Tights' has share of hits, misses

By Larry Katz
For the North County News

Funny man Mel Brooks, who pokes satirical fun at subjects in his movies, tries his hand at Robin Hood with his latest film "Robin Hood: Men In Tights."

Brooks stays close to the story, and that's a help. He takes most of the key scenes from the original and does the best he can. Some of the satire is very funny. Other parts of the film are simply not funny. When you think about it, there is only so much that anyone can do with the material at hand.

For instance, Brooks does things like give Maid Marion a chastity belt and plays Friar Tuck himself, but as a Rabbi. Then there are the subtleties like using Dom DeLuise in one funny scene mimicking Marlon Brando. He goes too far when he uses some "inside" material that only certain people can understand. A scene involving a horse is the funniest scene in the picture.

There are a fair number of sight gags and fast quotes to elicit laughter. The key element for me again, was Brooks' ability to follow the original and create something funny in each scene.

The casting is fine. Cary Elwes from "Princess Bride" and "Hot Shots!" is Robin. Amy Yasbeck is a comely Maid Marion. Richard Lewis is Prince John, and plays it very low key. Roger Rees plays the Sherrif of Rottingham.

Brooks directed, produced and co-wrote the film. While the film may not quite be a classic like "Blazing Saddles," it still has its share of clever laughs. Brooks has a rich resume and "Robin Hood: Men in Tights" only adds to it.

David Graf, left, and Joseph Dallaire want The Islands Golf Center to be a one-of-a-kind in Southern California. The golf course site is a county retention basin for ground water recharge just east of the 57 Freeway and just north of Ball Road.

It's not par for the course

Islands Golf Center will include driving range that's a lake

By Rusty Evans

Floating golf balls.

Thanks to floating golf balls, Joseph Dallaire and Dave Graf have done the unthinkable.

Once competitors in the high-stakes land-developing game, Dallaire and Graf are now business partners.

They have built The Islands Golf Center, a practice facility with a driving range, putting greens, pro shop, restaurant and a nine-hole, par 18, chip-and-putt course.

Nothing too unusual there.

However, the centerpiece of The Islands, scheduled to open later this month, is a 10-acre lake that will serve as driving range.

Yes, a lake.

The site, a basically useless county retention basin for ground water recharge just east of the 57 Freeway and just north of Ball Road, looks like an oversized swimming hole.

As for recreational possibilities, a fishing hole or a jet ski venue come to mind, and little else. But with the floating golf ball made in Korea, golf is now a water sport, at least at The Islands.

"These floating balls are three to five grams lighter than regular balls," said Graf, chief financial officer at The Islands. "We've had a lot of questions about them so we had them tested at a golf lab in San Diego by the Iron Byron hitting machine. They tested 3 percent to 6 percent shorter than regular balls, which, for most people, is about a one-club difference."

Graf and Dallaire have joined with Bill Cathcart, chairman of the city of Orange Planning Commission, and a Korean group of investors called Peacock Trading in the venture, which, they say, will benefit all involved.

"We're leasing what was an old sand and gravel pit from the Orange County water district," said Dallaire, president of Gentry Golf Inc. "We'll use an existing eyesore and turn it into something attractive."

Graf said the basin was available for lease because the clay at the bottom of the lake hinders the water's normal percolation back into the underground wells of Orange County.

"Now it's being put to good use," Graf said. "It's public and private working together, making a profit for the water district and also for us, hopefully."

Dallaire said the project is basically a product of the building climate in Orange County, one that is no longer booming.

"The housing industry has been hard-hit, so I started looking around for something else I could do," said Dallaire, who had seen liquid driving ranges in Florida, North Carolina, Colorado, Washington and Idaho, as well as one in Redding. "Shortly after that, Dave had a chance to start looking around. With the economic situation of the country the way it is, Dave was looking for a way to use his talents, so we teamed up for a new venture."

Dallaire is a civil engineer, while Graf's strength is in finances. Cathcart is a landscape architect who designed The Islands facility, while Peacock Trading brings retail experience to the operation.

"The whole team was formed for its expertise," Dallaire said.

The 4,200-square-foot pro shop will anchor the facility, which includes 115 parking spaces.

The nine-hole course has been described as "an up-and-down" course, because each hole will be a test of getting onto the green from say, a sand trap, and then sinking the putt.

"Here, you come to learn," Dallaire said. "Golf is the kind of game where you have to practice. You can't go out once a year and be any good. This is a very inexpensive way to practice, and when you go out on the course it's more enjoyable."

The driving range (lighted at night) will feature 90 tees, and will be the site of the Chrysler Golf Challenge Aug. 28. The Chrysler event is a test of accuracy, which is right up The Islands' alley.

"The Islands concept is target golf," Dallaire said. "You have to hit to the islands, so it improves your skill level. We'll have yardage signs on them and to hit the islands is a real challenge."

There will be four islands (each a floating dock) on the lake, at 80, 120, 150 and 200 yards. Graf said a drive across the lake would have to carry 300 yards, so the group doesn't figure to lose many balls that way.

And it won't lose balls the way most golfers do around water hazards. The setting, the technology, the islands — all of it is a first in Southern California golf. Dallaire said that was the idea.

"There is nothing like this in the world," Dallaire said. "We wanted to create something that was unique in the world. This is going to be a nice environment, a pleasant place to spend a few hours or spend an evening. I'm a golfer and I'm tremendously excited about it."

SOFTBALL

Granger still short of gold medal goal

By Rusty Evans
North County News

Michele Granger finally has a gold medal, but it's not the gold medal.

Granger, a former record-breaking Valencia High athlete, was undeniably pleased after pitching the South softball team to the gold medal with a one-hitter in the championship game of the US Olympic Festival in San Antonio, Texas, last week.

But she said there are many miles to go before she may have a chance to wear a medal from the 1996 Summer Olympic Games in Atlanta.

"Winning the gold doesn't do a whole heck of a lot for my chances of making the Olympic team," Granger said from her home in Davis. "But I think it does show the softball federation that I can still win the big game."

Granger stopped the West team, 2-1, in the championship game, but it was only one step in what she called "the loop".

The loop is the inside track to the final 15 players chosen to represent the United States in the next Summer Olympics, and there are several trials along the way.

The next is the American Softball Association national tournament, which takes place Aug. 13-21 in Connecticut. Granger will play for the Los Angeles-based Commotion team, for which she has pitched in only one tournament. That could be another showcase for her talents, if things fall into place for her.

"I don't know what my role will be with this team," Granger said. "I need to get a lot of work. The more I throw, the better I get. This team already has two other pitchers, so I don't know. If we lose early, there will be a lot of games, going through the loser's bracket. But if we're cruising along, I might not get that much work in."

Then comes a grueling national camp in September, where a traveling US national team will be selected.

"I've been to those camps and they're not fun," Granger said. "You're playing all the time and there are cuts all the way along. One bad day, and you're gone. And all pitchers can have a bad day."

Granger said one factor that may work against her in selection for the Olympic team is most of the players chosen are expected to play more than one position, something she hasn't done. Since she joined a women's team at age 13, Granger has played at higher levels than her age group, although only as a pitcher.

"I have always moved up. I couldn't have gotten where I am if I hadn't done that," she said. "But the pitching was so much better and those teams didn't need me for my hitting."

While the top 15 players at the national camp in September will comprise the US National Team, the top 60 will go to next year's Olympic Festival. Granger said if she isn't among the top 60 she may retire.

"In September I'll see where I am and go from that point," she said.

"I might be able to work my way up through the open tryouts, but if I'm not even in the top 60, what's the point?"

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of: ANICETO G. MORENO

A PETITION has been filed by Helen B. Moreno in the Superior Court of California, County of Orange.

THE PETITION requests that Helen B. Moreno be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in Section 9100 of the California Probate Code. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a formal Request for Special Notice of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Section 1250 of the California Probate Code. A request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

CAR CARE CORNER

THE AUTO TUTOR

Solutions to your car problems from the Automobile Club of Southern California

QUESTION: I recently purchased a 1989 Audi, and went to the DMV to register it. The clerk informed me that the title was marked "salvage," and that I would need to get a brake and light inspection before I could register the car. Why do I need a brake and light inspection, and what is a "salvage" title?

ANSWER: A "salvage" title means that the vehcile, either by having been damaged in a collision or by theft and vandalism, was considered "totaled," meaning it would cost more to repair than the vehicle is worth. Many times these vehicles are repaired and sold at salvage lots after which the title is marked "salvage." When a vehicle has been wrecked, the DMV requires brake and light inspections to ensure the systems are operating properly. The inspection is done at a facility licensed by the state. For a local facility, call the Bureau of Auto Repair, at (800) 952-5210. If the vehicle passes, you will be issued a certificate acceptable to the DMV.

For your own safety, it is advised to also have a complete inspection and analysis performed to ensure all the car's systems and specifications are correct.

QUESTION: I recently took my 1989 Celebrity on a trip through the Great Basin in Nevada, and one of my tires blew out. The spare was supposed to have about 60 pounds of air in it, good for temporary use (50 miles at under 50 mph). It had only 35 pounds of air in it, which made it look slightly flat when I put it on the car. Worse yet, the nearest service station was 66 miles away, and I didn't make it. After 45 miles, the tire blew, leaving me stranded!

Why wouldn't 35 pounds work when it's the maximum pressure on my regular tires?

ANSWER: The low pressure caused too much friction, causing the tire to overheat, and blow out. However you might not have made it anyway because it's only good for 50 miles. Thirty-five pounds is insufficient because the tire is very narrow and requires high air pressure to properly support the weight of the car.

If you travel in remote areas regularly you should get a full-sized spare tire.

QUESTION: I took my 1983 Chevrolet Malibu to a tire dealer to have two new tires mounted on the front. When I picked up the car, the new tires were on the rear. The manager said the factory directive indicates it's safer to have the best tires on the rear of the car for stability in case of a blow out.

I always thought the opposite was true, and a truck driver friend of mine agrees. Who is correct?

ANSWER: You and your friend are correct. Vehicles are usually more difficult to control if a front tire blows, since the front wheels steer the car. Also, since the front tires wear faster than the rear you can keep the old tires a little longer by putting them on the rear.

The shop hasn't done what you ordered, and should correct the problem free of charge If they don't, contact the Bureau of Automotive Repair, at (800)952-5210.

QUESTION: I have a 1989 Dodge Shadow which uses unleaded gasoline. Can I use the brands of gas that were developed for use in leaded gasoline cars, such as Unleaded Extra, or EC-1?

ANSWER: Since leaded gasoline is no longer offered in California and all nozzles are equipped to fill only cars that take unleaded gasoline, a good rule of thumb is, if the nozzle fits, you can use the gasoline. Also, most of the newer brands developed for use in older vehicles have a higher octane rating of 88-89 octane. This gives you a choice now if your car pings while using regular unleaded at 87 octane.

QUESTION: I am planning to buy a new car and my primary concern is fuel economy. I've heard conflicting arguments as to which delivers better gas mileage, a manual transmission or an automatic. Can you shed some light on the subject?

ANSWER: Generally, manual transmissions deliver better fuel economy and performance than automatics, but there are many factors to consider when making comparisons.

Manual transmissions usually have better gear ratios, and a fifth gear or overdrive, which uses less fuel when cruising at moderate or high speeds. A number of automatics with overdrive are available; some are electronically (computer) controlled which results in better mileage. However, regardless of which automatic you have, you will have less control over the fuel economy than with a manual transmission.

For further comparisons, you may want to get a copy of the "Gas Mileage Guide" published by the Envrionmental Protection Agency (EPA), available at new car dealers or EPA offices listed in the phone book. The guide has fuel mileage for all current models sold.

Costly crashes

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration says the cost of vehicle crashes is "... genuinely shocking."

■ Cost in 1990: $137.5 billion (1 in 3 attributed to DUI related driver impairment).

■ Non-DUI related estimated at $91.7 billion.

■ Estimated 5 percent due to mechanical faiures (brakes, steering, tires, etc.).

If just 10 percent of these mechanically related accidents could be averted through preventive maintenance/repair, dollar savings to society could be $458,500.

Chrysler eliminating CFCs from vehicle air-conditioning systems

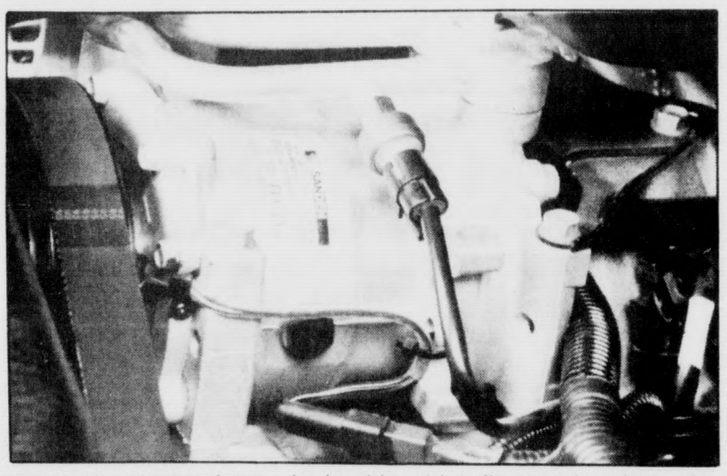
Chrysler Corporation recently announced it will eliminate ozone-depleting R-12 refrigerant from air conditioning systems in all Chrysler-built vehicles by Jan. 1, 1994, two years ahead of federal government mandates and faster than previously announced.

"We've moved as aggressively as possible in removing R-12 (a chloroflourocarbon, or CFC) from our product line, and we believe our rapid deployment of air conditioning systems using R-134a (a non-CFC refrigerant) is in the best interest of our consumers and the environment," said Ronald R. Boltz, Chrysler's vice president-Product Strategy and Regulatory Affairs.

The company began using R-134a refrigerant in air conditioning systems on 1993 model year Jeep Grand Cherokees, Chrysler Concords, Dodge Intrepids, Eagle Vision, and all Chrysler, Dodge and Plymouth minivans. These will total more than 750,000 vehicles in the 1993 calendar year.

To support consumers affected by the change from the CFC R-12 to non-CFC alternatives in older model cars, Chrysler is evaluating service and warranty programs.

One tactic being pursued is development of a CFS-free "drop-in" R-12 substitute. To this end, Chrysler has entered into an agreement with IGC Intermagnetics General Corp. to pursue the possible development of such a refrigerant.



The look of the future is in this chlorofluorocarbon-free air-conditioning unit being installed in new Chrysler vehciles. The unit uses an environmentally friendly non-CFC refrigerant, R-134a.

According to Thomas W. Sidlik, vice president Customer Satisfaction and Vehicle Quality, Chrysler will back all existing warranties, both extended and basic, for air conditioning repair using the best means available at the time. This may range from R-12 materials' adapting older units to the non-CFC refrigerant R-134a, or, if developed, use of a non-CFC R-12 drop-in replacement.

In addition to evaluation of warranty positions, Chrysler is working to educate dealers and consumers on the impact of the change.

Dealer showrooms also will be carrying information brochures explaining what the issues are and why the change is occuring.

Under the 1990 US Clean Air Act and consistent with the amended Montreal Protocol, the federal government requires terminating production of R-12 by Jan. 1, 1996.

CALIBER MOTORS, Inc.

Authorized Mercedes-Benz Dealer

Dear Mercedes-Benz Owner,

We at Caliber Motors would like to thank you for being our customer. We are proud that you have chosen to drive the finest automobile in the world, the Mercedes-Benz. As you know, even the best engineered car needs maintenance, and that maintenance should be performed by factory-trained professionals with access to the most advanced technology available.

All of this may be found under one roof at Caliber Motors. Our goal has always been to provide our customers withe the highest quality of service anywhere, and at the most competitive prices. In the past we have offered coupons or special discounts on particular items, but in today's market, that is simply not enough.

We are therefore pleased to announce the new Caliber service price program, Competitive Service Care Plus. This is not a special limited offer, but rather a whole new philosophy. We have conducted research to determine that you spend your money on, which maintenance is most frequently performed and on all of these items we have drastically reduced our parts and labor prices.

We encourage you to compare our new prices with those we have offered before and with those of any other authorized dealership or independent shop now. The quality of our work, as before, remains incomparable.

Please take a moment to look over our new Competitive Service Care Plus Menu and please call on us at Caliber Motors, where we're making it more affordable to keep your Mercedes-Benz on the road.

Sincerely,
John L. Harbaugh

ROGER MILLER FORD

I just want to drop you a line to tell you what a wonderful dealership you have! I purchased a new Escort which is the second car I have purchased from you. Your salespeople were very professional and not once did I feel that I was pressured into making a purchase. I look forward to making further purchases from your dealership in the future.

Sales pace is decreasing inventories

Patrick Veling's
PROPERTY LINES

In a second sign that the north Orange County real estate market may be improving, third quarter 1993 months' supply inventory levels have shown a decrease when compared with the same quarter last year.

Months' supply inventories are an estimate of the number of months required to exhaust inventories at the sales pace of the most recent 12 months.

The figures provide a snapshot of the real estate market on the date of the study. Therefore, the following assumptions must be used: 1) No new listings will be added to the market; 2) Buyer activity will remain at the pace of the previous 12 months; and 3) All homes are equal in their appeal.

The inventory news is especially welcome when added to the June, 1993 closed sales figures, which were slightly above those of the same month last year.

It proves that unrealistic home sellers may finally be removing their properties from the market. As these sellers continue to leave the market, the basic economic laws of supply and demand should firm real estate values more quickly.

Fewer homes on the market, and the slight increase in sales activity, have combined to decrease third quarter inventories to an average supply of 13.7 months, down 0.4 months from the same period last year.

Inventories are currently 0.5 months above those of the previous quarter, but quarter-to-quarter comparisons are not as important as year-to-year.

The comparison of new inventory levels with those of the same period last year indicate that — at least for now — supply is more in line with buyer demand.

The improvement is not as strong in other parts of the county, however.

Newport Beach, for example, experienced a decrease of 3.4 months' supply when compared to the second quarter, but a dramatic increase of 17.8 months' supply over last year.

South county cities experienced a healthy decrease of 1.3 months' supply over inventories of the previous quarter, and a large decrease of 2.3 months' supply when compared to levels of the same period last year.

As long as too many unrealistic home sellers don't put their properties back on the market, the seasonal decline in listings during the fall months should result in a further decrease in supply.

Analysts agree that the supply of homes must drop to more reasonable levels in order for there to be a market recovery, indicated by stabilized values.

The inset table includes current months' supply levels by city, and their comparisons to the previous quarter and to the same quarter of last year.

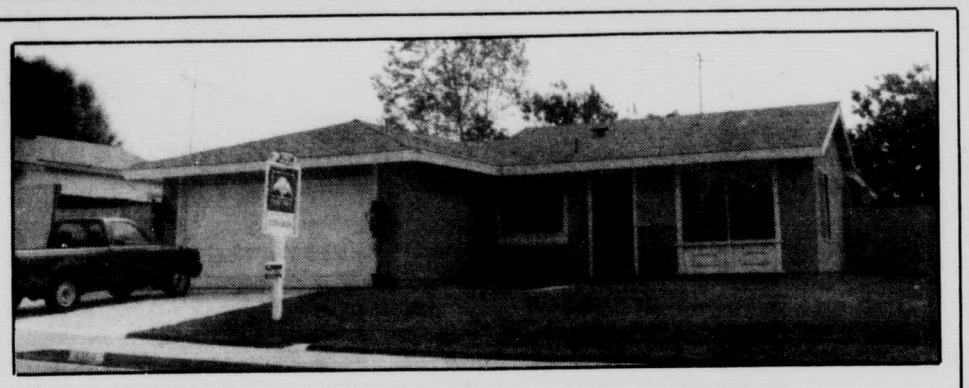
Featured homes



It's immaculately upgraded

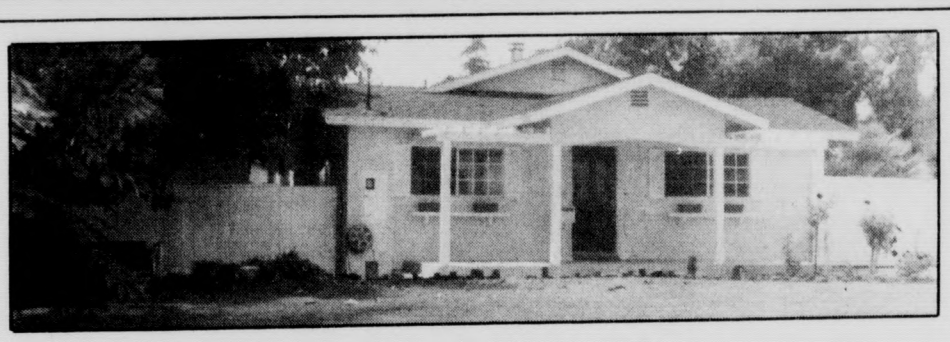
This upgraded home nestled on a cul-de-sac in the rolling hills of Yorba Linda has been reduced in price to $199,900.

A main feature of the home is a 20 X 14-foot master suite with slider overlooking manicured landscaping. The remodeled kitchen features new appliances, counter, sink and flooring.

A tasteful, light and airy interior is accented by neutal carpeting and mirrowed wardrobes throughout. The 3 bedrooms and 2 baths also have been remodeled.

The home is protected with a newer roof and includes a gated RV access and a concrete driveway.

For more information, call Chris Fry of Oaktree Realtors, at (714) 970-6020.



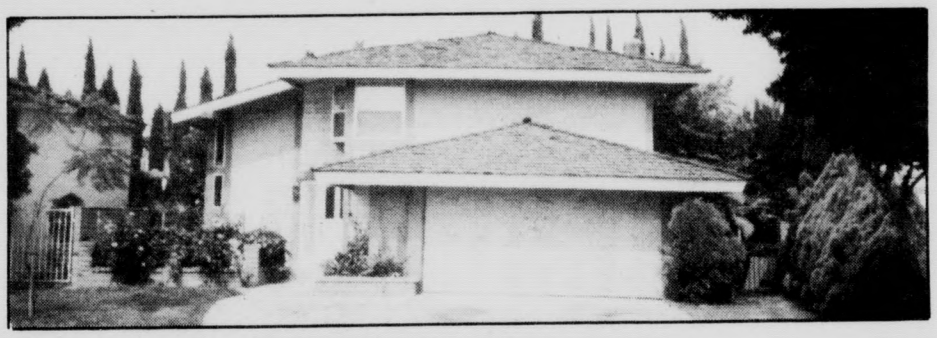
Remodeled to a dream

This is a contractor's statement in style. The La Habra dream home is for a contractor who wants to buy new and also wants a storage lot, but can't afford either. It was totally gutted three years ago.

Today, it has a solid oak and ceramic tile kichen and bath, central air and heat and more. The 3-bedroomer has a 4-car garage and an office with air and heat and a .75 bath and walk-in closet.

All this is located on a lot with alley access and lots of slabs for heavy equipment. The property is for sale at $189,850.

For more information, call Kurt Wilson of Century 21 Chuck Stevens, at (310— 697-2948 or (714) 870-6223.



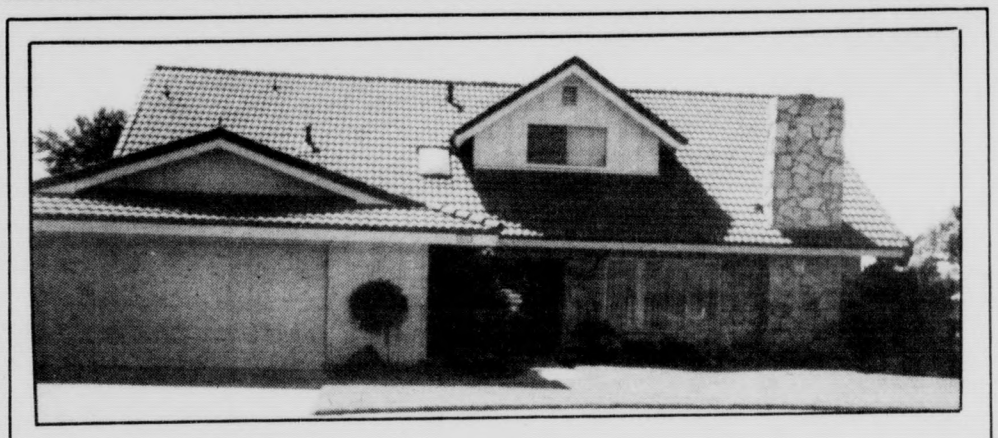
An outstanding bargain

Look no further. This 3-bedroom, 1.5-bath Anaheim home is priced to sell at $239,900.

Remodeled, the home features a bonus room, family kitchen, enclosed patio and dual glazed windows.

It has a new roof. Central air is among its amenities. A fireplace also is featured as is a French door in the living room.

For more information, call James Gentry of Century 21 Hansen Realty, at (714) 522-8381.



A home for executive family

This Anaheim home was a 5-bedroom abode, turned into 4-bedrooms, with 2.75 baths. It has a family room and formal dining room. The entry is accented with an oak door with oak and ceramic floors giving the home a unique look.

Five ceiling fans help cool the interior on those warm days, but central air is available for the hotter days. Plus there is room for a pool.

Also featured is a lifetime tile roof, French doors and windows and nearly new appliances.

Priced at $274,900, the home is listed by Sets Mori of Century 21 The Agency. For additional information, call Mori, at (714) 761-2411.

It's classic all the way

It's got wonderful curb appeal in the hills of Yorba Linda. Its classic features include an impressive raised tiled entry, volume ceilings, double doors in the master suite and a lavish master bath with marble vanity tops and ceramic tile surrounding the tub and shower.

The 3-bedroom, 2.5-bath home has formal living and dining rooms, a kitchen with a nook and a family room.

Multi-covered patio areas are among the outdoor amenities. A greenhouse window is located over the kitchen sink. And the roof is of sturdy concrete tile.

The home is priced at $268,000.

For additional information, contact Annette Scherrer of Century 21 Yorba Station, at (714) 692-7721.

Ready and affordable

Originally priced reasonably, this 3-bedroom, 1.75-bath Anaheim home has been reduced to even more affordability, to $171,900.

The kitchen has been remodeled. In addition the home has a formal dining room. The two large covered patios accent a park-like backyard.

A 2-car attached garage comes with a door opener.

For more information, call Rose Mohr of Frank Reed Realty, at (714) 772-3025.

The 'jewel' of California properties

"Out with the old and in with the new," may seem like the working credo of real estate development in most of Southern California. But one structure, nearly 200 years old, will surely never give way to a modern edifice.

Called the "Jewel of the Missions," San Juan Capistrano Mission stands as one of the oldest remaining structures in California. Since its founding on Nov. 1, 1776, the mission has been the center of the Orange County community, providing a window to the historical, cultural, and educational past of the state.

The mission, the seventh in the chain of 21 California missions, was established by the Franciscan Padres as a way to spread the Catholic religion in the New World. It was also the primary method of colonization utilized by the Spanish government.

The person most instrumental, however, in the birth of the California missions was Father Junipero Serra. Born on the island of Majorca off the Spanish coast, Father Serra sailed to the New World at the age of 36 to become a missionary. Twenty years later, he began founding missions. By the time of his death in 1784, Father Serra had left a legacy of nine missions along the California coast.

After Mexico gained its independence from Spain in 1821, the missions in California were secularized. Eventually, they were parceled, dividing the vast land holdings into "ranchos." In 1845, Mission San Juan Capistrano was sold at public auction for $710 to Don Juan Forster. The Forster family lived in the mission buildings for 20 years, until 1865 when Abraham Lincoln signed a patent returning control of the mission to the Catholic Church.

The mission fell into neglect until the turn of the century when restoration efforts began. Currently, the mission is in the midst of a 10 year, $20 million stabilization and preservation project that is focusing on preserving the mission and its surrounding buildings into the next century. Efforts are also underway to uncover the mission's past through on-going archaeological research projects.

Today, the memory of the mission's rich past is being challenged by something else. For many people, the mission is best known as the spot where the swallows return to nest year after year. Thousands of people gather at the mission on March 19 to see the small birds as they return to take up their old nests.

Legend has it that an annoyed innkeeper nearby chased the birds away and destroyed all of their nests at his inn. As the birds took to flight a priest from the mission happened to see them and called, "Come swallows, come to the mission. We will give you shelter."

ERA STAR, ERA Elite announce merger

Larry Gage, president of ERA STAR Real Estate Center, and Rajasekaran Durairaj, owner/broker of ERA Elite, have jointly announced the merger of their respective companies.

In announcing the merger, the principals noted that the move will be advantageous to both companies. Durairaj's firm is based in Anaheim Hills.

"Real estate is rapidly changing in the 90s and the strengths of combining our experience, resources and talent will only help our associates better meet the growing needs of their clients," said Durairaj. "The trend in our industry is to operate much larger real estate companies in order to be as responsive to consumers' needs as possible."

"The merger is part of our continued, aggressive expansion in north Orange County and represents a positive move for our growing company," said Gage.

"Larry has been an innovative and aggressive leader in the real estate industry," said Durairaj.

With the addition of sales professionals from ERA Elite, ERA STAR Real Estate will now have a staff of more than 250 sales associates serving the real estate market from offices in the south, north, central and coastal areas of Orange County.

"I am pleased to have someone of Raj's character and integrity on our managment team," said Gage. "His experience will be an asset to ERA STAR."

Gage said that Durairaj and most of his associates will work from the ERA STAR facility located off Nohl Ranch Road and Villa Real in Anaheim Hills.

Craig Matthews joins ERA STAR

Craig Matthews has recently joined the ERA STAR Real Estate team, according to Larry Gage, president.

Matthews formerly worked in the construction industry, but switched to a real estate career. He claims his experience in the construction industry has helped him be a better real estate agent. He has a penchant for hunting down "diamonds in the rough."

"I saved money by purchasing both my homes as fixer-uppers. Now they are the best on the block," Matthews said.

Matthews resides in Huntington Beach with his wife, Kate. In his spare time from real estate, he likes to maintain an outdoor lifestyle. He enjoys cycling, playing racquetball and basketball.

Homes for the hard working and not-so-famous

ERA STAR Real Estate Center is offering a Mediterranean-style home for $469,000. It has 4 bedrooms, 2.75 baths and more than 2,750 square feet of living space.

Professional landscaping in the front yard includes miniature palm trees, lush shrubbery and foliage and manicured lawns.

The entry features ceramic tile and leads to formal dining and living room areas. The lower level also features a large family room with fireplace.

Only four years old, the home features all contemporary upgrades and amenities. The gourmet kitchen is a chef's delight with tile counters and new appliances.

The second level is highlighted with a sweeping master suite that includes a retreat with a cozy fireplace. The view is terrific from the master suite and the backyard.

The rear of the home is secure with rolling hills that make privacy almost guaranteed.

A 4-car garage completes the picture. And there are no association fees or Mello Roos on the property.

Landmark earnings dip

Landmark Bancorp of La Habra said second-quarter earnings plunged 51 percent, to $156,000. Interest income fell 20 percent to $3.5 million. President Craig D. Collette attributed the lower results to a planned downsizing of the bank, which was done to preserve its capital requirements.

Landmark, parent of Landmark Bank, also announced it has reached a $1.3 million settlement with its insurance company over unauthorized funds loaned by a former bank officer.

Rates as of July 29, 1993. All loans listed are conventional 30/30 for loans below $203,150 except as specified in the "Notes" column. Points are the per cent of the loan balance paid to the lender at the time of loan closing. For fixed-rate loans, borrowers are advised to compare lock-in features; for adjustable programs ask the lenders if the loan has the potential for negative amortization as well as other important factors such as the index, margin, Caps, insurance and lock-in. Lender Type is: B = bank; K = mortgage banker; R = mortgage broker; S = savings & loan. Mortgage bankers and brokers are licensed by the California Department of Real Estate as either a broker or corporation. For more information call Calif. DRE at (916) 227-0931.

All Annual Percentage Rates (A.P.R.) are calculated by Mortgage News Co. based on a $203,150 loan amount, the points as shown and $700 total fees. An A.P.R. is an estimated annual cost of the loan to the borrower, and they are included in this chart for comparison only. When applying for a loan, Federal Truth-in-Lending law requires lenders to calculate an A.P.R. specific to each loan offer. All quotes are not an offer to enter into a loan agreement. All rates are subject to change; verify rates and terms prior to applying for a loan. All lenders charge other fees in addition to those shown, as well as provide loans with different rates and terms for different loan amounts. For a consumer guide on how to shop for a mortgage, send $4.50 check payable to Mortgage News Co., 1505 East 17th St., Suite 211, Santa Ana, CA 92701. If you have questions please call (714) 836-1177.
